STUART KIRSCH (UNIVERSITY OF MICHIGAN)

THURSDAY
APRIL 9 2015
7:00PM
CAPA SYMPOSIUM

HOSTED BY CAPA
CO-SPONSORED BY ENVIRONMENTAL STUDIES

Stuart Kirsch is professor of anthropology at the University of Michigan. He works in the Pacific and the Amazon on indigenous rights and the environment, conducting long-term research and advocacy with the people living downstream from the Ok Tedi mine in Papua New Guinea. Author of numerous books and article, Kirsch's most recent book, Mining Capitalism: The Relationship between Corporations and their Critics, examines how corporations respond to critique. His work on indigenous land rights and the environment includes compensation for damage caused by nuclear weapons testing in the Marshall Islands, conservation and development in the Lakekamu River Basin of Papua New Guinea, and mining and property rights in the Solomon Islands. Professor Kirsch has also collaborated with Amerindian communities in Guyana and Suriname on several projects concerning indigenous land rights and mining.
